OLD SHADY'S SONG.

Interesting Reminiscences by Gen. Sherman-A Touching Tribute to the Colored Man. General Sherman, in North American Review for

I noticed recently that Gen. Ben Harrison, a candidate for President of the United States, found himself called on to deny a charge of having said that a dollar a day was all that an American laborer should expect. I remember when I, myself, worked for half a dollar a day-Sundays, holidays and rainy days exceptedand we all remember when Congress enacted $13 a month with a ration per day full compen-sation for an able-bodied soldier who had to work twenty-four hours a day. Sundays and holidays included, with the chance of getting killed or wounded thrown in gratis.

We should be above such demagogy now, and I am sure the people of the United States are not to be deceived by such nonsense. Still this circumstance calls to my memory a little episode which may explain the matter even to the satisfaction of the most prejudiced.
July 4, 1863, the Union army captured the city of Vicksburg. In the siege were three corps d'armee: the Thirteenth, McClernand; the Fif-teenth, Sherman; the Sixteenth, McPherson. After the surrender, the Thirteenth corps was sent by General Grant down the Mississippi to assist at Port Hudson and lower river towns; the Fifteenth, Sherman, was dispatched inland to Jackson and Raymond to drive the rebels well out of Mississippi, and the Sixteenth, Mc-Pherson, remained in Vicksburg as a perma-A great many negroes, slaves, bad escaped within the Union lines. Some were employed as servants by the officers, who paid them regular wages; some were employed by the quartermaster, and the larger number went North. Among the first class named was a fine, hearty darky," known as "Old Shady," who was employed by General McPherson as steward and Shady." After supper he used to assemble his chorus of "darkies," and sing for our pleasure the songs of the period, among them one personal to himself, and, as I then understood, composed by himself. It was then entitled the "Day of Jubilee," but is now recorded as simply "Old Shady;" and I do believe that since the Prophet Jeremian bade the Jews "to sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations," because of their deliverance from the house of bondage, that no truer or purer thought ever ascended from the lips of man than did at Vicksburg in the summer of 1863, when "Old Shady" sang for us in a voice of pure melody his own song of deliverance from the bonds of slavery. Here it is, not in full, for other verses have been added, but I give it entire as it then was:

Yah! Yah! Yah! Come laugh wid me, De white folks say Old Shady am free I 'spect de year of ju-be-le Am a coming, am a coming.

Hail mighty day! Chorus-Den away, den away, I can't stay here Den away, den away, for I am going home Repeat—Den away, den away, I can't stay here n

Den away, den away, for I am going hom Old massa got scared. and so did his lady; Dis chile break for old Uncle Aby. Open the door, for here's Old Shady Hail mighty day!

Chorus-Den away, den away, I can't stay here longer, etc. Good-bye, Mass Jeff, good-bye, Mass Stephens, 'Souse dis nigger for taking his leavins. I 'spect by and by you'll see Uncle Abraham A coming, a coming. Hail mighty day!

Chorus-Den away, den away, I can't stay here n longer, etc. Good-bye, hard work without any pay.
I's going up North, where de white folks say Dat white wheat bread and a dollar a day

Am coming, a coming. Hail mighty day! Chorus-Den away, den away, I can't stay here no longer, etc.

O I's got a wife and nice little baby. Away up North in the lower Canady Won't they shout when they see Old Shady A coming, a coming. Hail mighty day! Chorus-Den away, den away, I can't stay here :

longer, etc. Now it is plain to me that "Old Shady" is responsible for the saying that white-wheat bread and a dollar a day were all the old slave hoped for. I have no doubt that Gen. Harrison has belped us sing that song with an emphasis amounting to an indorsement, just as Generals Grant, Sherman, McPnerson, Logan Strong, Hickenlooper, etc., have often done. After the war I met "Old Shady" on a steamboat on the upper Mississippi, when he sang for us on the hurricane deck that good old song, which brought tears to the eyes of the passengers, and more recently I beard of him far up in Dakota, near the "Lower Canada," toward which he seemed to lean as the coigne of safety, where his wife and "nice little baby" had sought and obtained refuge. I believe him now to be dead, but, living or dead, he has the respect of the old Army

a day. OUR BEARDED PRESIDENTS.

Some Interesting Facts About the Presidents of the Past and Their Opponents. New York Mail and Express.

General Harrison will be the fifth President to enter the White House with a full beard. His four bearded predecessors were, like him-self, Republicans. From the time of Washington to that of Lincoln all the Presidents, with the excepcion of two, were clean shaven. These two, Martin Van Buren and Zachary Taylor, wore small side whiskers but no beards. It is worthy of note that, with the coming in of the Republican party in 1860, beards have been worn by all of the Republican candidates. Lincoln, Grant, Hayes and Garfield wore full beards, while their defeated adversaries, Mc-Cleilan, Seymour, Greeley, Tilden and Hancock, had clean-shaven chins.

From the earliest times beards have been symbolic of strength, power and wisdom. With the cutting of Samson's beard he was shorn of his physical powers. Socrates was termed "bearded master" by Persius, as the beard was a symbol of wisdom. The Tarks think it a dire disgrace to have the beard cut. Slaves who serve in the seraglio have clean chins as a sign of their servitude. Geoffrey, the crusader, and Bouchard, of the house of Montmorency, were both termed "the bearded" for their bravery and heroism in battle. Dr. Bulwer, maintaining the dignity of the beard, in his "Artificial Changeling" says: "Shaving the chin is justly to be accounted a note of effeminacy, as appears by sunuch who produce not a beard, the sign of virility. Alexander and his officers did not shave their beards till they were effeminated by Persian luxury. It was late before the barbers were in request in Rome. Diogenes, seeing a man with a smoothly shaved chin, said to him: "Hast thou whereof to accuse nature for making thee a man and not a woman?"

On the 6th of next month the people will re-member Gen. Harrison as the bearded warrior, who, at his country's call, proved his bravery on the battle-field, and since his return has been equally faithful in the discharge of his duty in matters pertaining to the state, and they will Take kind notice of his beard, And speak with much respect and honor Both of the beard and the beard's owner—

At the polis. They Must Wear Buttoned Shoes.

Philadelphia Record. The meanest man in the world is the proprie tor of a store in this city. He has just posted up a notice to all the saleswomen in his establishment to the effect that they must wear buttoned shoes hereafter. When asked his reason for this order he said he lost money on the girls who were laced shoes. "I have in my store about one hundred girls," said he, "and they all wear laced shoes. These shoes become untied loses ten minutes a day, and one hundred girls | to a bold and positive statement on any importlose 1,000 minutes in the same time. That anttopic. makes about sixteen hours per day, or two days, work. I pay my girls $1.50 per day, and the loss consequently means $3 per day, or about $1,000 per year. That much money will keep my boy and girl at school very nicely, or will pay my gas bills, and I propose to save it."

A Suction Gas-Well. Correspondence Pittsburg Dispatch. In the eastern part of Arapohne county, Colorado, a few pioneer settlers, encouraged by the advancing rain belt, located about five years ago and put down a pipe well after artesian water. They struck, at 400 feet, not water, but gas. The projectors of the enterprise, for the first two days, or, to be more accurate, a trifle over thirty hours, were in rapturous exultation.

Upon the broad pratrie of this centennial State they would build the Pittsburg of the West. Suddenly the presumed gnome laborers who were working the blow fan at the bottom of the well quit work, and another shift commenced to reel up. Instead of sending gas high into the air the well began sucking in air. And it continued for thirty six bours. Ever since the well has spouted gas for thirty hours and then be come a powerful suction pipe for thirty-six. Of course it is useless unless it could be harnessed to some mechanical contrivance that would run by gas power part of the time and continue to operate by a reverse windmill until the gas came again. It would be difficult, though, to imagine the existence of an imprisoned monster in the earth that requires thirty-six hours to fill its lungs and send forth a decidedly bad breath for thirty hours thereafter. The curious scientist has a wide field for speculation before him in this well, which has no fanciful, but real existence.

A Picture of Cardinal Gibbons. Baltimore Letter.

Cardinal Gibbons greets a visitor with a cordial smile and a hearty grasp of the hand. At first blush he appears to be a rather ordinary little man. The paller of health on the smoothly shaven face contrasts well with the sombre black bues of his raiment. His figure is slight and apparently delicate. He is rather under the average beight, and save for the head of iron-gray bair would impress one as decidedly youthful in appearance. His clothing is black, of clerical cut. The only insignia of rank is the deep red silk cravat that encircles his slender neck. There is really nothing extraordinary in his appearance save for a marvelous resemblance to another of Maryland's noted sons, Arthur Gorman. As the Cardinal engages in conversation the mannerisms and tricks of voice and action make him and the Senator counterparts of each other. Gorman has a way of looking straight from the unfathomable depths of steel-gray eyes, and so has the Cardinal. Both have the knack of being genial to the outsider, who, after a half-hour's talk with either of them, comes away well pleased with their courtesy, but abselutely unable to remember a single valuable point in the conversation. Like the Senator,

A Lying Voice. Indiana Christian Advocate

The Voice continues to circulate its politica hand-book which says that the Indiana Las lature which passed the probibitory law of 18 was Democratic, whereas not a single De in either branch voted for it. It says also that the Legislature which repealed it was Republican, whereas it never was repealed. It was aimply annulled by a Democratic Supreme Court, and the Legislature of 1857, which was Democratic in both branches, having a majority of twenty-one in the House, did not even bury fts dead body. They simply did nothing, leaving the State three years without any law on the subject—free whisky entirely. The Legislature of 1859 was Republican. As probibition was unconstitutional, that Legislature did what the Democratic Legislature of 1857 refused to dobe sure, but it was better than pothing, and quite abreast the sentiment of the times when the war of the rebellion was beginning to loom up and men were more engaged in trying to save the Union than to regulate saloons.

A Sensible Cosmetic-

It is wellknown in South America that the women of Brazil are noted for their clear complexion, and travelers say it is due entirely to their eating the fruit of the Papah tree, and at night with annointing their faces with the rind. The women of the United States are note their sallowness, freckles, eruptions of the sin, etc., all rendering the complexion unsigitly, Physicians say this is the result of indigestion. which in this climate is general, and the evil offects of ordinary cosmetics being so readily de-tected when used, deters sensible people, who naturally shrink from criticism, from using them. The safest and surest plan to follow, therefore, appears to be the correction of disordered digestion, the natural sequence being the restoration of a healthy appetite, which under lies good health and good looks. Professor Finckler, the German scientist, who has just returned from Brazil after four years' ab makes the gratifying statement that Papah fruit contains most remarkable digestive proper-ties, and that when there is any deficiency of the human digestive elements this fruit will supply it. Scientists have recently succeeded in making a powder from this fruit, known as Papoid, which is now largely sold in this country in the form of tablets. The Brazilian fruit appears to supply nature's remedy for the unfortunate sallowness of our women. The efficiency of Papoid and Papoid Tablets for dyspepsia and kindred ailments has the unqualified indores ment of such authorities as the Philadelphia Medical World, St. Louis Medical Register, Albany Medical Annual, Buffalo Medical and Surgical Journal, Cincinnati Luncet and Clinic, Medical and Surgical Reporter, of Philadelphia and other medical publications.
